INTRODUCTION.

THIS little book might eaſily, by a competent pen, be made the text to a volume, as large, if not as uſeful, as the huge "Poſt Office Directory," of which it was the modeſt precurſor. No ſuch ambitious object as the production of a volume of that claſs is to be here indulged in. On the contrary, the purpoſe of the preſent ſhort introduction is to offer a few ſuggeſtions upon topics obviouſly belonging to the contents of this commercial record of the merchants and goldſmiths of London in the ſecond half of the ſeventeenth century. It will be found to demonſtrate the value of not a few family names as ſignificant elements of the hiſtory of ſocial progreſs.

It has, indeed, been ſo in all time. From Homer's catalogues down to the knightly nomenclature of the "Roman de la Roſe," and other long-breathed poems of the middle ages; from the Battle-abbey Roll of the conqueror's chiefs at Haſtings, and from that of King Henry's army at Agincourt to our modern muſters, ſuch documents elucidate acceptably the courſe of military heroiſm. The conjecture is as ingenious, as it is juſt, lately made about Shakeſpeare's early life, that the Admiralty books, with their myriad of ſeamens' names, may give his in ſome royal ſhip, and ſo account for his perfect ſea phraſes.

The moſt intereſting manuſcript liſts are thoſe of the notabilities preſent at the Preſton Guild for more than 500 years; and that of the founders of a Library in Hereford 200 years ago. The Guild is in exiſtence ſtill. The books given to the library by Viſcount Scudamore, and ſome hundreds of the county people, were rotting on a damp floor not long ſince. It may be hoped they are now better cared for.

Equally attractive are the lists still preserved of the zealous contributors to public loans to meet a national crisis. John Locke and Somers were among the first proprietors of the Bank of England. Those of the East India Company, or the like Stocks were the leading Tories.

The founders of our early colonies—holders of even five-shilling shares—have thus their enduring record; and a diligent collector may enrich his library of tracts with the printed names of all the graduates of old Harvard College in New England in the seventeenth century—so zealously did the Puritans ground their sons in learning.

The present production, although of more moderate pretensions, contains individual names of some historical weight. Its most striking feature is the severance of "Goldsmiths that keep Running cashes"—precursors of the modern bankers—from the mass of merchants of London, in 1677.

Before that year the goldsmiths had really been bankers, and proper laws had long been advocated for their better establishment in the craft. This list fixes their residence chiefly in our ancient Lombard Street. Of fifty-eight, the whole number of them, thirty-eight lived there. Of the reſt, we have Blanchard and Child, partners, in Fleet Street, at the Marygold; and James Hore in Cheapſide, at the Golden Bottle, for then every houſe of buſineſs had its ſign.

Other banking names are ſtriking, viz. the Corniſh Bolitho, the Lancaſhire Hornby, the Yorkſhire Duncomb. Theſe men may be preſumed to have enriched their deſcendants who are ſtill conſpicuous among us. The reſt of the Goldſmiths of 1677 ſeem to have been little remarkable in the next generation, when, after the revolution of 1688, joint-ſtock banking, and ſafe facilities in paper currency took the ſtart which conſtitutes an era in finance. The capitaliſts of London in the reign of Charles II. were ſorely damaged by his iniquitous ſhutting of the Exchequer againſt their legitimate claims. They were content at laſt to be ſimply the firſt holders of ſtock in the national debt, into which their claims were turned. But Michael Godfrey, the firſt deputy-governor of the bank, and Sir N.

Herne, afterwards zealous ſupporters of the new ſyſtem of banking after 1694, are here only ſimple merchants. Two other names of the Goldſmiths, James Fowles and James Heriot, deſerve ſpecial mention. They were Scots; and the Fowles appear to have been long ſettled in London in connection with their countrymen. In 1695, the Lord Provoſt of Edinburgh was to addreſs his letters on the ſubject of Darien to William Paterſon at the houſe of one of the name; and it is no idle ſpeculation to ſuppoſe that this goldſmith (a riſing banker) of 1677 afforded Paterſon, then a pedlar, or incipient merchant, the benefit of his financial experience.

James Heriot has a ſtronger aſſociation with a Scottiſh worthy of finance, George Heriot, the goldſmith, and the munificent benefactor of Edinburgh, who came ſouth with his patron, King James; and, as his biographer tells us, he proſpered here as he had proſpered in the north. Beſides his bequeſts to his native town, he left ample legacies to his brothers-german, of whom one was James; and their wealth and name were aſſuredly repreſented by the James Heriot the goldſmith of this liſt.

In it alſo ſtands John Peatterſon, a merchant already, and ſo giving a body to the tradition in Dumfriesſhire which places William Paterſon of the Bank of England in the counting-houſe of a relation of his own name in London about 1677.

The ſpelling of the two names Fowles and Peatterſon is correctly phonetic, ſo as to ſhow the Scottiſh nationality of the men; and in the latter caſe ſhowing alſo the tact with which Eliot Warburton in his "Darien" makes a Scottiſh friend criticiſe his clumſy Engliſh pronunciation of the word Paterſon.

Another name in the general liſt, that of Alexander Pope of Broad Street, has an even more famous aſſociation, as Mr. Camden Hotten ſhows in his Adverſaria for July, 1857. The locality was then a charming ſuburb of gardens; and although the poet Pope, when taken away with his father, the popiſh merchant, to be educated in Windſor Foreſt by a prieſt, may have been too young to know how genial a home he was loſing, he need not have been too vain, as it is feared he was, to reviſit in after life the pleaſant abode of his earlieſt years.

Greſham's garden was in Broad Street, with its lectures on muſic and all ſcience. King Richard's Croſby Hall, and Shoreditch with its unhappy leman of Edward IV, were hard by; whilſt Milton's birth-place, his retreat, and his grave were cloſe at hand.

The picturesque character of old London, graced by the ſparkling Thames of olden time, is a circumſtance not to be forgotten, when we are calling up the memories of any claſs of its inhabitants.

In 1677 the city was full of fine reſidences for merchants; and in this liſt we meet with names of entertainers of wits of the time. Here is Fountain, doubtleſs father to the wealthy knight with whom Dean Swift was familiar, as ſhown in his letters to Stella. Here, too, is Kiffen, the Baptiſt Alderman whom James II. could neither affright nor ſeduce, with a leſs reſpectable name of the ſame claſs, that of William Lob.

Here is Benjamin Bathurſt, the founder of the family diſtinguiſhed on the Bench and in the State, with Bragg their connection. Here is a tribe of the Houblons, who furniſhed the Bank of England with its firſt Governor, Sir John; and whoſe names, ſeven in number, may be read in documents recorded at the Board of Trade claiming convoys for their fleets. Theſe ſeven names are found in the more intereſting record—the ſermon of Biſhop Burnet at the funeral of this Houblon—with his eulogy and city deſcent from Henry the VIIIth's time. The Vanſittarts will find their wealthy forefather here, and many more Dutch members of the old church of their nation in Auſtin Friars. The Van Milderts of this liſt were doubtleſs progenitors of the learned late Biſhop of Durham of that name; and the predominance of Dutch over Flemiſh merchants ſettled in London is to be attributed to the ultra-Proteſtant feeling of that time. Puckle the wit, and the eager projector, is here in the perſons of his father and uncle. Nor are the Barnardiſtons, Ducanes, the Fredericks, Beckfords, and Papillons, Burdetts, Batemans, Biddulphs, Bulteels, Carbonnels, Coventrys, the Dominiques, Criſps, Furleys, and the Holfords, to be omitted.

The "Richard Steele" in the liſt muſt have been related to Sir Richard, who was more ſucceſsful in the advocacy of the rights of trade with his pen than in his multifarious commercial ſchemes.

The ſpecial occupations of theſe merchants are not ſtated with much preciſion. After the Goldſmiths come the Black-well Hall factors, repreſenting our ancient ſtaple in woollens, whoſe privileges were the occaſion of a great legal controverſy ſhortly before the date of this little publication; and they were ſettled with prodigious learning in the Common Pleas by Chief Juſtice Sir Orlando Bridgman, as may be ſeen in his logical judgments. One particular addreſs is very intereſting. It is at "the Inſurance Office," then a new inſtitution among us, and only extended with great ſucceſs in the beginning of the next century, in the reign of Queen Anne.

The Royal Exchange was a prominent place of buſineſs for our merchants of 1677. The Dutch walk, the Turkey walk, the Iriſh walk, the Spaniſh walk, and the like, have a ſignificance far beyond the agreeable coſmopolitan ſentiments expreſſed in the Spectator upon Addiſon's and Sir Richard Steele's viſit to the Exchange of their day, crowded with men from every clime. In theſe ſeveral walks could be found, in the earlier years of the reign of Charles II, the collected members of our various trades beyond ſea; and it was from them that the Lord Mayor was directed by a royal order in Council, to have elected the body that was to aſſiſt miniſters in the preparation of our laws of trade and the colonies. That original order in council, ſigned by Lords Clarendon and Southampton, is preſerved in the City library in Guildhall. It contains an article of extreme intereſt at this moment, ſpecially providing for the election of the Italian merchants to that body. This commercial tie with United Italy cannot fail to be ſtrengthened ſo as to revive an alliance with us too long interrupted by religious prejudice on both ſides. The liſt has a few Italian names, but more Portugueſe—perhaps brought over from the connection with "the Royal Houſe of Liſbon" in the perſon of Charles the Second's Queen, received by us with becoming good humour, according to the pungent epigram which bade "the De'il take Hyde and the Biſhop beſide, that made her bone of his bone."

The diviſion of the merchants in their reſpective dignities is worth a paſſing reflection. Some are knights and baronets; ſome are aldermen; the maſs are plain John or Thomas, with a conſiderable ſprinkling of Miſters—the maſter of olden times being an addition of worſhip. The Captains and Majors of the liſt were doubtleſs the officers of the train-bands, of no little hiſtoric fame in London, from King John and Magna Carta even to John Gilpin.

The homes of many of the merchants named in this liſt were in the ſuburbs of London, and there they ſeem to have tranſacted their buſineſs, not in the City. We find them at Highgate, ſo well known before as the reſidence of the philoſophic Earl of Arundel, where Lord Bacon died,—at Newington Green, Iſlington, Clerkenwell Green, Hackney, Hogſden, Bethnall Green, Kingſland, Moorfields, Spital-fields, and Mile End Green, —places now ſo many centres of crowded population, not the ſweet rural retreats, which we are content to go for farther a-field, being, like our fathers, fully awake to the delights of foreſt life.

The Hogſden of the liſt (our Hoxton) is ſhown to have been pretty full of merchants; and we know how delightful a group of gardens that ſuburb poſſeſſed in the olden time. Not very long after 1677, its worthy horticulturiſt Fairchild there practiſed his art with eminent ſucceſs; and not only founded the annual ſermon ſtill preached by diſtinguiſhed divines every year upon the bounty of the Creator in the gifts of nature, but tried hard with his pen to teach the citizens to adorn London with gardens. This is a conſideration well worth purſuing at this moment of London's revival. Her ſeventy graveyards, ſo long feſtering charnel-houſes, may, under wiſe direction, become centres of floral beauty and inſtructive recreation to our youthful London population.

Some reſided on "The Bridge," the London Bridge for ages covered with dwellings, from one of which the daughter of a rich citizen fell into the Thames to be ſaved by the bold apprentice Oſborne, who married her, and founded the ducal family of Leeds.

The painted portraits of the more diſtinguiſhed of theſe fathers of our trade would deſerve a ſpecial ſtudy. Sir John Houblon's may be ſeen at the Bank of England; Benjamin Bathurſt's is aſſuredly piouſly preſerved by his ennobled family; Sir John Tulſe, who has left his name perpetuated on the picturesque hill near the Cryſtal Palace, muſt have poſſeſſed good taſte enough to be a portrait-painter's patron; and the letter in the Spectator aſſerting our ſuperior appreciation of that branch of art is well juſtified in the numerous portraits ſcattered all over the land. Our commerce is indeed exceedingly rich in materials of hiſtorical portraiture, and in its products. Without oſtentatiouſly boaſting of a ſuperiority which is not to be pretended over the ſtateſmen who grace ſo many halls, our merchants, from the pencils of Holbein and Antonio More down to the lateſt dates, may challenge compariſon with them. The City and its halls are full of them; and Sir Thomas Greſham's deſign of an univerſity in London could not be better revived and realized than by annexing a fine gallery of merchants' portraits to its other branches of inſtruction. It ia a good ſuggeſtion, that the profit got by the Treaſury from the ſale of his eſtate in Broad Street to a Banking Company, ſhould be purſued to its legitimate iſſue,—the eſtabliſhment of that univerſity.

The topic of Greſham's Univerſity has ſome elucidation from the liſt of 1677. Comparatively few merchants then reſided in Broad Street, or in Biſhopſgate Street. Rents were therefore low in that quarter. In 1760, when the Greſham property was ſold, under an Act of Parliament, for the Exciſe Office, its income was leſs than 450*l.* a-year; and the government made it up to 500*l.* The ſale, however, to the Greſham Chambers' Company, a few years ſince, netted a very large ſum to the Treaſury. That ſurplus is believed to revert to the truſts of Sir T. Greſham's will, ſince the Acts which have alienated the eſtate firſt from the Charity, and then from the Crown, are mere parliamentary titles—quite ſecure to the occupiers of the land, but not deſtructive of the rights of the objects of a founder. The matter is indeed under ſerious ſcrutiny before the Charity Commiſſion; and it has ſpecial claims to the fair conſideration of Her Majeſty's prime miniſter.

The John Temple of this liſt was probably of Lord Palmerſton's lineage. The Palmers of the liſt, too, doubtleſs belonged to the family which almoſt monopoliſes the Mercers' Company—Greſham's truſtees; and ſo Sir Roundell Palmer, the Solicitor-General, muſt not deſert his duty. Nor will he have forgotten his own labour of love in Greſham's lecture-room, when he helped his relative, Profeſſor Palmer, to do juſtice to his charge.

Earl Ruſſell will not, on this occaſion, refuſe his powerful aid to the improvement of the citizens of London, ſo often the defenders of liberty, and the advocates of ſcience. The City has indefeaſible claims upon Earl Ruſſell's ſympathies—if for nothing more—for the ſad ſacrifice of his great relative Lord William, led, from his priſon in the Tower, through the heart of the city to his ſcaffold in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, in order to cruſh the ſpirit of a people deeply attached to the houſe of Bedford.

Finally, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Gladſtone, will readily part with the large proceeds of the Greſham Charity-eſtate, which, by all the calls of conſcience, and the kindred rules of equity, belong to an object which he, of all men, the moſt approves—the liberal inſtruction of our youth.

The Harveys of the liſt are of a honoured ſtock. They are near kinſmen to Dr. William Harvey, famous in medical hiſtory as the diſcoverer of the circulation of the blood. He paſſed many of the laſt years of his eventful life with his brother Eliab, the merchant of London, who poſſeſſed "noble ſeats, and at leaſt 3000*l.* a year," ſays Aubrey. In thoſe days the phyſicians, with their College in Warwick Lane, may be held to have been citizens. It was at the Royal Exchange that Drs. Mead and Ratcliffe fought their well-known duel.

Three original copies of the list of 1677 are known. One is in the Bodleian library; one in the Manchester Free Library, bought for 5*l.*, (from this, owing to the kindness of R. W. Smiles, Esq., the Librarian, the present reprint has been made); one was sold at the sale of the Rev. Mr. Hunter's library for 9*l.*, although imperfect.

The volume—here reproduced as almost a fac-simile—is a curious little precursor of the London Directory, grown from its first edition of 1732 in 300 pages, to the huge volume, the Post Office Directory of the present day.

In the Lambeth Library there is such a list in manuscript of thirty years earlier date. It is a list of all the inhabitants of London liable to pay tithes, with the amounts due from each.

During the progress of this little volume through the press a most interesting fact relative to the history of trade has come to light. It appears from an old pamphlet that an "Office of Addresses" was started as early as 1650, by Henry Robinson, a well known writer on matters of commerce and finance during the commonwealth period. The ideas of this worthy are ſo advanced and ſound that it is more than probable that Sir William Petty, who ſoon after began to write upon theſe ſubjects, was indebted to him for ſome of his liberal views with regard to the extenſion of trade. Henry Robinſon's "Office in Threadneedle Street, over againſt the Caſtle Tavern, cloſe to the Old Exchange in London," comes out with a buſineſs-like preciſion in the very advertiſement, that promiſes well for his work—the keeping particular regiſters of all manner of addreſſes. Then follows a catalogue of ſubjects of inquiry, ſo copious and ſo curious as to be a new proof that there is almoſt nothing new under the ſun! Sixpence was the fee, and for this ſmall ſum anſwers to all ſorts of queſtions connected with buſineſs could be obtained. The whereabouts of merchants, the arrivals or departures of ſhips, the current price of certain commodities, were all to be aſcertained by viſiting this ancient Inquiry Office—the crude off-ſhoot of a commerce ſtruggling to develope itſelf, and anſwering for a time the purpoſes of a broker's office, the Stock-Exchange, and the modern newſpaper teeming with trade advertiſements.

Preface.

To the Merchants and Traders of the City of London.

Gentlemen,

ALthough the publiſhing of the enſuing Pamphlet (or Catalogue) may at the firſt view, ſeem to ſeveral perſons a ridiculous and prepoſterous attempt, yet the Author of this poor Collection humbly hopes, that it will not be exploded or rejected by you, for whoſe eaſe and conveniency (together with your forein correſpondents) he principally intended it: And if it prove ſo ſucceſsful as to receive a favourable acceptance from your hands, the cenſure of all other perſons not concerned in the conveniency ariſing by it, will not diſcourage the Author to proceed and make ſuch Improvements of this ſmall Embrio, as may ſoon bring it to a perfect birth. He humbly hopes no Apology will be required for ſuch Errata's or Eſcapes as have been committed as to the Orthography, or true writing of the reſpective Names of this Catalogue, as well for that he hath found it a very difficult thing, to procure ſo ample an Account of Names as he hath done; as alſo in regard his main deſign is, to publiſh this forthwith, to the end that if thoſe perſons who are concerned in the Uſe of it, do give it a favourable Receptance, he may ſet forth an Additional Catalogue far more correct and accurate; wherein if he may receive Encouragement accordingly, he ſhall not in any thing be better ſatisfied than that his poor Endeavours ſhall have anſwered thoſe Ends for which they were intended.

Adver-

Advertiſement.

WHereas, ſince the enſuing Tract was in the Preſs, the Author hath diſcovered the Habitations of ſeveral other Merchants, not comprehended in the Alphabetical Order; he hath therefore thought fit (rather than to omit them) to inſert them in the laſt Page of this Book by themſelves. And whereas the Author intends ſhortly to Reprint this Catalogue, with additions; he doth therefore deſire, that for the better furtherance of the next Edition, all Merchants, as well ſuch as ſhall be newly arrived from beyond the Seas, as alſo all ſuch as ſhall be newly ſet up, would be pleaſed to give in their Names and Habitations to Samuel Lee Stationer, over againſt the Church, near Popes-head Alley in Lombard Street. And if it happen that any Omiſ-

Omiſſion ſhall be made of any Merchants Names in this or the enſuing Edition, let the parties concerned repair to the ſaid Mr. Lee, where they may probably receive ſatiſfaction. And if any Bill of Exchange happen to be drawn upon any Tradeſmen or Shopkeepers under the denomination of Merchants, if they repair to the place aforeſaid they may receive due Information.
